

Room to Grow

Clemleddy Construction's
Lake Ariel Expansion Project

John and Dori Vallis loved their Lake Ariel A-frame home, but as their kids grew, the two-bedroom home became a little too cozy for comfort.

Since the lakefront property was too good to let go, the family embarked on a complete renovation of the home in 2007. The original idea to build an addition grew into a project that doubled the size of the home. They chose Clemleddy Construction to complete the project because of the company's good reviews. John appreciated that Craig, Clemleddy's owner, was involved personally. "He kept it an honest, straightforward process," explains John. The home was gutted, and an addition was built. The entire floor plan of the house was changed. Bedrooms were moved; bathrooms were eliminated; the kitchen was enlarged. The standard fireplace was transformed into a double-sided feature element. "The whole while, Clemleddy's team offered really good suggestions and solutions," recalls John. "We had a basic idea of what we wanted, but they translated our general thoughts and our feeling of the house into actual options and solutions."

Tongue-and-groove walls and the wood-finished kitchen show off high-quality craftsmanship. "Their quality of work is spectacular," John states. "The best part was, all of the people part of the Clemleddy team had that same level of commitment and level-headedness. I never felt like they were getting the job done just to get it done. I felt they were really trying to build the home that we wanted. Whenever someone asks me about a renovation or addition project, I always highly recommended them." For more, call 570-226-2899. ■
